

Joseph Foley

Joe was born on January 29, 1937, the oldest of four children of Joseph V. Foley, Sr. and Alice (McCarty) Foley. He graduated from St. Patrick's Grammar School in 1950 and Cathedral High School in Boston in 1954. He entered Cardinal O'Connell Seminary in 1954 and during his second year of philosophy at St. John's Seminary, he decided to return to secular life.

After many years in the business industry in customer service and purchasing in both the chemical distribution and paper industry, he retired from the International Paper Company in 1999.

Joe enjoys sports in his retirement, particularly football and baseball. In 1960 he was an original season ticket holder for the Patriots. As an aside, during that time there were 7 home games at $5.00 per game with the total cost of a season ticket at $35.00. In 1965, he went to a road game in New York when the Boston Patriots played the New York Titans at the Polo Grounds and Joe Namath was a rookie.

Joe resided at a senior residence in St. Colulmbkille's Parish in Brighton until his passing on May 30th, 2018.
